

September 24, 2001 – digicom's Palladio USB GSM is now suitable for Siemens

"Following today's tests, we certify that Palladio USB GSM for Siemens S25, S35i, M35i and C35i is now compatible with the new Siemens SL45 (model with integrated MP3 player). The tests have been carried out for more than 20 minutes calls on Windows™ and Macintosh® computers and haven't shown any connection problems".

This is the official communication digicom's research and development division has turned to the marketing office. With Palladio USB GSM it is now possible to connect to the USB port, also the Siemens SL45, to transmit and receive data up to 9.6Kbps.

Palladio USB GSM is the only solution available in the market that permits laptop users to send data with their cellular phone utilizing the USB port in place of IrDa or serial cable. It is ideal for those who don't have any PCMCIA slot available, or don't have serial or IrDa port on their computer.

Palladio USB GSM is powered by the USB port, preserving the cellular phone battery and guaranteeing a great autonomy.

With Palladio USB GSM is it possible to dial with any Internet POP both in analogic (V.32) and ISDN (V.110) mode. Furthermore Palladio USB GSM is bundled with telephone connection cable and software drivers to be immediately on-line.

Like all digicom's products of the latest generation, Palladio USB GSM uses the flash technology to be always upgradable.

Palladio USB GSM kit for Siemens SL45 will be available at distributors and resellers in the month of October with the end user price of L. 349.000 (€ 180) tax included.
